Dorchester (MA) (Postcard History Series)

Earl Taylor : Dorchester (MA) (Postcard History Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Dorchester (MA) (Postcard History Series):

In the early twentieth century, Dorchester was called "the model town of New England." It was the most favored residential section of Boston, bathed by ocean winds from the east, picturesque rivers and hills to the south, the finest boulevards and parks to the west, and a great city just ten minutes away via the best rapid-transit system in the world. As a result, the population increased from fifteen hundred during the Revolutionary War to two hundred thousand in the early 1900s. Dorchester looks at this neighborly community of skilled mechanics, tradesmen, and professionals through vintage postcards.

About the Author Earl Taylor, president of the Dorchester Historical Society, was trained as a rare books librarian, and he spent his early career at the Boston Public Library, American Antiquarian Society, and Brown University. He moved to Dorchester in 1979 and has amassed a large collection of maps, pamphlets, pewter, pottery, and other items related to Dorchester's history.
